

WHO IS A BUDDHA ?

- Chandra B Varma

The 'Buddha', often used for Gautam Buddha (543–483 B.C.), as a matter of fact is a generic and appellative term. Further, Gautam has not been the only Buddha born in this planet, e.g., Dipankar Buddha, Kondanna Buddha, Kanakmuni Buddha (Pali Konagamana), Kassapa or Kasyhapa Buddha and so on. Maitreya (Pali: Metteya) is the name of the Future Buddha.

Traditionally it is held that 'Buddha' signifies one who has attained enlightenment after perfecting the 10 paramis, viz., dana (charity), sila (right-conduct), metta (loving compassion), panna (wisdom) and so on. Before the attainment of such perfections one is called a 'Bodhisatta'. (Dr Ambedkar sought to achieve the perfection of wisdom hence he showed special fascination for the epithet 'Bodhisatta').

There are 4 popular uses of the term Buddha:

1. Sammāsambuddhas or Sabbannu Buddha (The Omniscient Buddha):

has a mission to proclaim the truth to all beings for their Deliverance or Nirvana (Pali: Nibbana). He is therefore called 'Sattharo' ('Teacher' or 'Master'). As he plays the predominant role in the world he is styled as the 'Bhagava'. He is called a 'physician' ('bhisakko') because he diagnoses the malady of suffering and prescribes its remedy. He is called 'Kinsman of the Sun' ('Adiccha-Bandhu') as he dissipates the darkness of ignorance. He is a 'Buddha Vira' as he gives refuge to all kinds of people. He is called 'Anuttara' or Peerless as he excels all. He is called a true "Brahmana" - not by birth but by karma - as he excels in wisdom; self-control; and virtue. He is compared with the Universal Monarch (Raja Chakkavatti); and a lion (siha) for his extraordinary powers.

2. Paccheka Buddha is designative of the Enlightened ones who is not bound by the pledge to preach the Way of Deliverance to the world.

3. Chatusacca Buddha is one, who has destroyed the mental defilements or asavas.

4. Bahussuta Buddha signifies any learned person in rather a loose sense.
